COURT OF TAX APPEALS DECISION HIGHLIGHTS

If the RTC's final decision, order, or resolution does not pertain to a local tax case, then the CTA is bereft of jurisdiction to entertain an appeal.

A local government unit demanded the payment of environmental tax from the taxpayer. After unsuccessfully questioning the environmental tax assessment and demanding a refund of the same at the administrative level, the taxpayer filed an appeal before the regional trial court ("RTC"). However, the case was dismissed which prompted the taxpayer to file an appeal with the tax court.

The taxpayer argued that the tax court possesses jurisdiction because the subject matter of the action is a local tax. This is bolstered by the Watershed Code and its IRR which named the exaction as an "environmental tax."

However, the tax court decided against the taxpayer since its appellate jurisdiction over decisions of the RTC becomes operative only when the RTC has ruled on a local tax case. If the RTC's final decision does not pertain to a local tax case, then the CTA is bereft of jurisdiction to entertain the same.

If generation of revenue is the primary purpose, the imposition is a tax. However, if regulation is the primary purpose, the imposition is a regulatory fee. To accurately classify these exactions, the objectives and purposes of the pertinent tax ordinance must be consulted. The tax court found that the environmental taxes imposed under the Watershed Code are fees, and not taxes, as the object and nature thereof are mainly one for regulation. (DOLE Philippines Inc. – Stanfilco Division v. The Sangguniang Panlungsod of the City of Davao, and the Hon. Sara Z. Duterte-Carpio and Hon. Lawrence D. Bantiding, CTA AC No. 286, June 7, 2024)

COURT OF TAX APPEALS

DECISION HIGHLIGHTS

UPDATES

Jurisdiction questioning the validity of CIR's collection is different from jurisdiction questioning the validity of the assessment.

The taxpayer filed a Motion for Reconsideration against the Final Decision on Disputed Assessment ("FDDA"). Despite the appeal pending with the office of the Commissioner, the taxpayer's bank account was garnished. Aggrieved, the taxpayer filed an appeal before the CTA questioning the garnishment.

While the case is pending, the taxpayer received on March 27, 2023, a decision of the CIR granting the Motion for Reconsideration, thereby canceling and withdrawing the FDDA. Thus, on May 19, 2023, the taxpayer filed a supplemental petition bringing the administrative Decision to the Court's attention.

The CTA ruled that although they have jurisdiction over the original petition questioning the garnishment, it did not acquire jurisdiction over the supplemental petition questioning the assessment. Here, the taxpayer received the administrative Decision on March 27, 2023, giving it until April 26, 2023, within which to file its judicial appeal. It filed its Supplemental Petition, attached to its motion to admit the same, on May 19, 2023. This was 53 days from its receipt of the administrative Decision and 23 days from the end of 30-day period. Accordingly, the administrative Decision has become final and executory. As such, even if the CTA had gained jurisdiction over the same, there would be nothing left for it to declare null and void. (Tower Club, Inc. v. Commissioner of Internal Revenue, CTA Case No. 10384, June 25, 2024)

An application for Compromise Settlement is not a continuation of taxpayer's administrative protest.

The BIR garnished the taxpayer's various accounts due to the latter's failure to file a protest on the FAN. In response thereto, the taxpayer filed a protest letter against the garnishment. Unmoved, the BIR denied the protest and maintained the garnishment.

Rather than filing a judicial protest with the CTA, the taxpayer applied for a Compromise Settlement on the ground of financial incapacity. Such application was still denied by the BIR. This prompted the taxpayer to amend its application and invoked the ground of doubtful validity. Over a year later, the BIR denied the application to which the taxpayer filed a judicial appeal to the CTA.

The CTA ruled that the appeal must be dismissed due to lack of jurisdiction. The court explained that an application for Compromise Settlement is not a continuation of administrative protest. Thus, the counting of the 30-day period to appeal cannot be counted from the denial of the Compromise Settlement. The CTA reasoned out that to consider applications for compromise as "administrative protests" would allow taxpayers to indefinitely delay filing a judicial appeal, rendering the 30-day period for such nugatory. (Producers Saving Bank Corporation. v. Commissioner of Internal Revenue, CTA Case No. 11485, June 21, 2024)

COURT OF TAX APPEALS DECISION HIGHLIGHTS

A new LOA is not needed for the reinvestigation/reconsideration of the assessment made on the taxpayer.

The BIR issued against the taxpayer a Final Decision of Disputed Assessment (“FDDA”) denying the latter’s request for reinvestigation/reconsideration of the assessment. The taxpayer appealed to the tax court and argued that while the LOA was initially valid, the same became invalid when the case was reassigned to another revenue officer during reinvestigation.

The tax court ruled that the assessment notices were valid. It was held that a new LOA is not needed for the reinvestigation/reconsideration of the assessment made on the taxpayer. It follows that upon the issuance of an assessment (thru a FAN), the objective of an LOA becomes functus officio. The LOA has already served its purpose. The audit investigation is already finished and the danger or abuse sought to be avoided in the assessment (by not issuing an LOA) is already absent.

Here, in the review of the taxpayer’s request for reconsideration or reinvestigation, the new revenue officer will just re-examine the books of accounts that were already considered and evaluated by the former revenue officer, and the additional documents, if any, that were submitted for reinvestigation. This is because it is not a continuation of audit investigation of the taxpayer’s books of accounts. Hence, there was no violation of due process. (Alberto Lim Tangso/ A.L. Electrical Shop & Parts Supply v. Commissioner of Internal Revenue, CTA Case No. 10367, June 18, 2024)

The breakdown which indicates the term “zero-rated sale” does not cure the taxpayer’s failure to comply with the imprinting requirement

The taxpayer filed a motion for reconsideration on the denial of the CTA of its refund claim on the ground that the term “VAT ZERO-RATED SALES” is not prominently printed on the sales invoices. The taxpayer argues that the imprinted “VAT zero-rated sales” in the breakdown portion of the invoice is already sufficient to comply with the said requirement.

The CTA ruled that the breakdown which indicates the term “zero-rated sale” does not cure taxpayer’s failure to comply with the imprinting requirement. Parenthetically, the information necessary to be indicated in the “breakdown” on one hand, and the writing or imprinting of “zero-rated sale” on the VAT official receipts on the other hand, are requirements governed by separate provisions Tax Code.

Otherwise stated, if the breakdown requirement, which necessarily indicates the type of the sale, is intended by law to also encompass the imprinting requirement, then the law could have easily deleted the specific provision on the imprinting requirements for both zero-rated sales and exempt sales for being superfluous. (Schaeffler Philippines, Inc. v. Commissioner of Internal Revenue, CTA Case No. 10358, June 25, 2024)

COURT OF TAX APPEALS

UPDATES

A prior tax clearance in favor of an absorbed corporation is unnecessary for the surviving corporation to absorb the former's unutilized input VAT.

The taxpayer absorbed another corporation in a merger. Thereafter, the taxpayer was issued with a Letter of Authority ("LOA"). In its assessment, the BIR questioned the taxpayer's utilization of the absorbed corporation's excess input tax. It argued that the application of excess input in favor of the taxpayer as the surviving corporation is premature, pending the completion of the BIR's audit investigation of both parties to the merger.

The tax court agreed with the taxpayer's position that the surviving entity in a merger can, by operation of law, automatically claim the unutilized input VAT credit of the absorbed entity. Statutory merger shall be effective at the time the certificate approving the articles and plan of merger is issued, and this results in the transfer of all rights, privileges, immunities, franchises, and other assets of the absorbed corporation without need of any act or deed.

A prior tax clearance in favor of an absorbed corporation is unnecessary for the surviving corporation to absorb the former's unutilized input VAT. (PMFTC Inc. v. Commissioner of Internal Revenue, CTA Case No. 10714, June 19, 2024)

THE EOPT ACT IN TRANSITION

By

Rodel C. Unciano

By this time and with the effectivity of the Ease of Paying Taxes (EOPT) Act, most taxpayers may have already been able to submit to their respective district offices of the Bureau of Internal Revenue (BIR) inventory of their unused official receipts which will be utilized as invoices. Some may have probably been able to order printing of new set of invoices to be used in their transactions. And probably some may have already been able to request for reconfiguration of their machines in compliance with the provisions of the new law.

Well, there should be no issue with the early and immediate compliance of the new rules since the EOPT Act is already in effect as early as January 22, 2024, fifteen (15) days after its publication in the Official Gazette. But as regards compliance with the value-added tax (VAT) and other percentage tax provisions of the EOPT Act, taxpayers are actually given six (6) months from the effectivity of the regulations to comply.

The law was signed by the President on January 5, 2024. Pursuant to its effectivity clause, the EOPT Act would take effect fifteen (15) days after its publication in the Official Gazette in a newspaper of general circulation. As the law was published in the Official Gazette on January 7, 2024, it therefore took effect on January 22, 2024.

THE EOPT ACT IN TRANSITION

By

Rodel C. Unciano

However, pursuant to its transitory provisions, taxpayers are given six (6) months from the effectivity of the implementing revenue regulations to comply with the amendments on VAT and Other Percentage Taxes provisions. The revenue regulations took effect on April 27, 2024, fifteen (15) days following publication in the BIR official website. Therefore, by mandate of the EOPT Act itself, taxpayers are given six (6) months from April 27, 2024, or until October 27, 2024, within which to comply with the amendments to VAT and other percentage taxes provisions.

However, following Revenue Regulations (RR) 7-2024, it would appear that the six-month transitory period provided under the EOPT Act has not been faithfully considered in the implementations.

For one, under RR 7-2024, unused official receipts (OR) may no longer be used to support claim for input tax upon effectivity of the regulations. While it may still be used as supplementary document, it is no longer valid for claim of input tax. In fact, the regulations require that the phrase "THIS DOCUMENT IS NOT VALID FOR CLAIM OF INPUT TAX" be stamped on the face of the document upon effectivity of the regulations.

While the ORs may be used as primary invoice, and therefore, a valid support for claim of input tax, the regulations, however, require a condition to be complied, and that is to strikethrough the word "Official Receipt" on the face of the manual and loose leaf printed receipt and stamp "Invoice", "Cash Invoice", "Charge Invoice", "Credit Invoice", "Billing Invoice", "Service Invoice", or any name describing the transaction. That is allowed only until December 31, 2024.

Also, documents issued by Cash Register Machines (CRM) and Point-of-Sale (POS) machines containing the word "Official Receipt" beginning the effectivity of the regulations shall no longer be considered as valid for claim of input tax by the buyer/purchaser. Taxpayers using CRM/POS will have to reconfigure these machines in order to generate invoice instead of official receipt.

Further, under RR 7-2024, taxpayers that are using duly registered Computerized Accounting System (CAS) or Computerized Books of Accounts (CBA) need to revisit their system to comply with the provisions of the EOPT Act. This is considered a major enhancement which requires BIR approval. Following the regulations, taxpayers are given only until June 30, 2024, to do the reconfiguration. Any extension due to

By

enhancements of system shall likewise be subject to BIR approval but no longer than six (6) months from the effectivity of the regulations.

So, what would be the effect of non-compliance within the six-month transitory period?

Following the regulations, it would appear that the BIR is now on the go to strictly implement the provisions of the EOPT Act, even as we are still within the six-month transitory period. Taxpayers shall now bear the consequences of non-compliance. Official receipts shall no longer be valid support of input tax. Other penalties under the law will already apply.

While the intention of the law is to make tax compliance easier, taxpayers should be given ample time to transition to the new rules. In the first place, the six-month transitory period is a mandate of the EOPT Act itself.

compensation, and the price fixed on the grant date, shall be considered as additional compensation subject to income tax and to withholding tax on compensation. No capital gains tax (CGT) shall be imposed since there is no realized capital gain on the part of the employer-grantor. No documentary stamp tax (DST) shall likewise be imposed upon grant by employers of equity-based compensation to its employees. However, DST shall be imposed upon the actual issuance of shares to the employee-grantee in accordance with Sections 174 and 175 of the Tax Code.
